<h2>Events[edit]</h2>

May 2-September 27 – The Writers Guild of America (WGA) commences a strike against film and television studios, its first labor stoppage since 2007 and the largest production stoppage for the American entertainment industry since 2020, after the union and the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers (AMPTP) failed to agree on a new contract by the WGA's May 1 renewal deadline.^{[30]}^{[31]}^{[32]} Other writers unions such as the Writers' Guild of Great Britain, Australian Writers' Guild, Writers Guild of Canada subsequently announce their support for the strike and instructed their members to refrain from working on American projects during the duration of the strike, <a href="/wiki/List_of_productions_impacted_by_the_2023_Writers_Guild_of_America_strike" t

- impacted several film productions and releases.[33][34] The WGA later declared the strike over on September 27, three days after the Guild and AMPTP reached a tentative agreement.[35]
- July 14–November 9 – SAG-AFTRA commences a strike against film and television studios, after the union and the AMPTP failed to agree on a new contract after their previous agreement expired on June 30. This marks the first time that actors have initiated a labor dispute since the 1980 actors strike. With the concurrent WGA strike, this becomes the first time that actors and writers have walked out simultaneously since 1960.[36][37][38][39] Film projects produced by these American studios but made outside the U.S. may also be affected by the strike.[40][41] However, actors represented by another union, such as Equity in the UK, may instead be required to continue working on projects.[42]
- July 21 – The Barbenheimer phenomenon occurs as Greta Gerwig's Barbie and Christopher Nolan's Oppenheimer are released in theaters on the same day. The opening weekend box office was the first time two films opened with over $100m and $80m in the same weekend, the biggest box office weekend since before the COVID-19 pandemic, and the fourth-biggest weekend of all time.
